Chapter 1 by Bashir El-Saddik

I got into the yacht and set out on a 4000 mile voyage from New York to Athens. On the way to Athens, we felt as if the waves were getting slightly larger and stronger.

"Captain, I think the waves will become much worse by sunset!" I shouted over the crashing waves.

Though the captain ignored me and kept sailing through the crashing waves. It was one hour after sunset and there were no big waves to be seen so I knew that i was wrong of what I said to Captain.

"See West, I knew there was going to be no....." before the Captain could finish his words, an abrupt wave hit our yacht and it rolled over and pushed down to the bottom of the sea.

I fumbled to catch some oxygen tanks so I could attach them to my gear but i was hit by the flying pieces of the yacht and i fainted.

I woke up. only to find myself on an island though i did not have any memory of how this happened. I could see myself holding the oxygen tank so I left them aside. I felt hungry and wanted to eat. I looked around and saw some fish. I put my oxygen tank on and set out to catch some fish.

I was surprised to see that there were no fish so i swam some more and i was shocked by what was right in front of my eyes. It looked looked really majestic and was a sight like no other. I couldn't believe that right in front of me was the long lost underwater city, 'Atlantis'.

Chapter 2 by Queen of Words

Atlantis rose above me like a giant bubble. I gasped as it suddenly lit up and started flashing. Who knew that Atlantis possibly existed? The Captain would have been so proud. Where was the Captain anyway? I decided to go back to the island to look for him.

An hour later, I was relaxing in a tree after a futile search for the Captain. Well, more like panicking. I didn't know how to survive without him. But I had to find a way into Atlantis before hurricane season came. It was time to go.
